The Streets of New York

The Chocolate Lover's Guide to New York City

Five maps to the best chocolate restaurants in
New York City from Union Square

November Edition

Letter from the editor:

The Streets of New York is a fun, collaborative magazine that comes out once a month exhibiting different activities for New Yorkers to do on their days off, relaxing in Union Square. When people read The Streets of New York they will see vibrant, images of the activities they can partake in and information on how to get to these locations from Union Square. Once they've finished the activity they can take the survey at the end of the article and send it in to The Streets of New York office giving feedback.

November's edition, Map to Chocolate exhibits the best places to get chocolate in Manhattan. Map to Chocolate presents six restaurants in New York City: Magnolia Bakery, Max Brenner's, Serendipity, Dylan's Candy Bar, The Sugar Factory, and Bread's Bakery. Each page exhibiting the restaurants are styled with images of what the specific restaurant is known for. The pages will give thorough directions on how to get to each restaurant from Union Square using the subway, walking, and driving. The magazine also has lists of other chocolate deserts available at these restaurants.

Map to Chocolate is meant to give people in New York, native or tourist a fun afternoon of adventure, and sweet encounters. The idea of The Streets of New York is to get a crowd of people who are constantly working, thinking, and rushing to part take in a mindless activity. It encourages readers to be adventurous and enjoy life.
