event tomorrow

What better way to survive a new york city summer than delving into the rich cultures that make up the city. for my final project i have put together a site that will guide you through an entertaining and culturally rich summer! every-day there will be a live stream of a festival or fair happening in ny on that day and below the particulars of that even. Beneath that will be information for an event happening the next day. We will use a hashtag #fairlycultured to create a communal archive of this years events. The site will be updated daily.

My design is simple and straightforward but fun and lighthearted. i wanted something that was fun to visit but didn't take away from the information given. Something that can be visited quickly and understood without too much work.

Final Assignment, Design for Journalists, Spring 2016, Dylan Greif, summer survival kit for recession casualties and inflation victims.
