

For Cover: How Do You New School?/How Does One New School?/Teach Me How to New School

From how to manage new homes, who to follow on social, how they keep sane and how to develop sustainable habits, students share how they manage to live their best lives as urban dwelling New Schoolers

For Introduction: Our university captures one of New York City's prominent traits—a magnetic pull of difference and diversity. Over 10,000 individuals from all over the world, of varying backgrounds and creative and non-creative disciplines, plant themselves in the gloom and glitter of gotham in hopes of making the best out of what the city can offer. But to make the best out of anything, New York transplants must learn how to manage the dirt and grime before completely basking in the glitter. The methods to our madness, how we manage pre, post and during the big move to the city, like us vary and differ. This zine hopes to not only inform but also celebrate those differences and rejoice in what can bring us together.

(Category 1) Social Media

How do New Schoolers get social online? Students tell us their favorite apps and we ask who they're following and how the people they follow influence their work.

(Category 2) Homes

What's in a home? Non New Yorkers share their story on how living in two places (or more) changed their lives, for better or for the not-so-great.

(Category 3) Sustainability

How do students get green and stay green? We ask how environmentally conscious individuals help Mother Earth on the daily and how much of what they learned in school is implemented in what they do.

(Category 4) Interests

What gets a New Schooler excited, up and out of bed? Students tell us how they keep sane when's classes are out of session.
