whats is design

Design, to me, is the creation of something with the user in mind. Different from art which is partly for the consumer and partly for the artist, design takes it to the next level and services solely the consumer. Design can also be used in conjunction with other content to further expand the readers understanding of that content.

what is journalism?

journalism is the recording of events to share with the masses. As we explored to limits of good journalism, many are finding more visually stimulating, creative pieces are the most effective when reaching a large audience, especially with the advancement of technology.

what is design in journalism?

Design in journalism is important for a few reasons. It invites users and designers to explore the boundaries of fiction and non-fiction. Where art becomes fiction and then it presents, represents, facts accurately.

How did i design this page?

I left all of the type the same size. I kept the answers single spaced and put double space. everything is flush left and the same typeface helvetica, neue, regular size 12.